Job description

As Lead Developer in HMRC, you will be responsible for setting technical strategy and direction, ensuring the delivery of high-quality, scalable, and secure services.

You will guide and support fast paced engineering teams across the full service lifecycle, providing expert judgement on complex technical issues and acting as the escalation point for high-risk challenges.

More broadly, your leadership within the Development Guild will shape engineering standards, development processes, and solution design, ensuring all work meets rigorous quality and security benchmarks while aligning with business needs.

You will contribute to the developer community, providing technical leadership, coaching and mentoring the guild, promoting knowledge sharing and adoption of good practice.

You will guide the ways in which the team works and be proficient in a wide range of technical systems and involved in identifying appropriate technology and approaches, deciding when software should be written.

You will lead delivery of high quality software that meets user needs, and be responsible for overseeing the development of clean, secure code following a test-driven approach.

Person specification

This role will suit an experienced technical leader who is proactive and self-driven, able to anticipate risks and opportunities, take ownership of outcomes, and drive progress while maintaining high standards for quality, security and operational performance.

Proactive and self-driven: spots issues early, initiates improvements, and follows through without needing close supervision.

Strategic thinker with strong technical judgement: able to balance delivery speed, risk, cost and long-term maintainability.

Leads through influence: sets clear engineering standards, builds alignment, and makes decisions transparently using appropriate governance.

Coaching mindset: mentors engineers, grows capability across teams, and promotes knowledge sharing and consistent ways of working.

Quality and security focused: advocates for clean code, test-driven development, secure-by-design principles and strong assurance practices.

Collaborative communicator: works effectively with product, architecture, operations and delivery partners, translating between technical and non-technical audiences.

Resilient under pressure: acts as a calm escalation point during incidents and high-risk decisions, staying focused on outcomes and learning.

Key responsibilities

Set technical strategy and direction, ensuring architectural decisions, tooling choices and design approaches support scalable, secure, high-quality services.

Provide expert judgement and act as the escalation point for complex or high-risk technical issues, guiding teams towards robust resolutions.

Lead and influence engineering standards, ensuring development, testing and operational practices meet quality benchmarks across teams and services.

Oversee the full lifecycle of build/run/improve, ensuring services remain resilient, compliant and aligned to user and business needs, even when not personally hands-on.

Provide leadership to developers, delegating technical work, supporting planning, reviewing solution approaches, and ensuring development is on track and to the expected quality.

Assure security compliance, embedding secure-by-design principles and ensuring risks are understood and mitigated.

Lead on solution design & technical decision-making, including reviewing and challenging design choices (e.g., Redis persistence strategies, interface behaviours, micro-service consolidation).

Ensures compliance with performance and design standards, influencing cross-team technology choices (e.g., SSO, Keycloak, REST template decisions).

Mentor and develop engineers, promoting knowledge sharing, and raising capability.

Contribute to the development of robust, accurately estimated, project plans, considering risk and mitigation.

Critical decision making: Making and recording effective decisions following the appropriate decision-making criteria, framework or guidance.
